ABOUT THE INSTITUTE

The Indian Institute of Technology (IIT), Roorkee is the successor of the University of Roorkee, the oldest technical institute of the Indian sub-continent. It was established as the Roorkee College in 1847 and rechristened as the Thomson College of Civil Engineering in 1854. Recognizing its yeoman contribution for the development of the country for over 100 years, this temple of learning was elevated to the status of a University, the first technical university in India in 1949. The University of Roorkee was converted to IIT Roorkee by the Government of India on September 21, 2001, thereby further elevating it to an institute of national importance. Over the years it has built up and maintained an excellent academic reputation. The IIT Roorkee has academic departments in the area of Engineering, Sciences, Architecture, Management, Humanities and Social Sciences besides many centres of higher education and research.

ABOUT THE DEPARTMENT

The Department of Metallurgical and Materials Engineering was established in 1963 with the intake of sixty students for undergraduate curriculum leading to Bachelors degree. Later, post-graduation curriculum was started in 1969. The Department has been actively involved in research since its inception and the first award of PhD degree is recorded in 1972. Earlier, the faculty members were engaged in research in the areas of Physical Metallurgy, Thermodynamics and Kinetics of Metal extraction and Powder Metallurgy. In the early 70's, a number of new faculty members joined and started activities in the areas of Ferrites, Composite Materials and Electroless coatings of amorphous and microcrystalline Ni-P and Co-P. It was increasingly realized that the barriers between Metals, Ceramics and Polymers needs to be broken and an integrated approach to Materials should be evolved. The name of the Department was changed from Department of Metallurgy to Department of Metallurgical and Materials Engineering in the year 2001 with the introduction of courses in Polymers and Ceramics at the curriculum level and through research in Metal-Ceramic composites and dissimilar materials joining.

Currently there are 22 faculty members guiding about 40 research scholars in diverse areas of materials research. The Department annual intake is about 100 students in the BTech program and 30 students in the M.Tech Program.
